in the 2004 outbreak, the young were affected more frequently, diarrhea was again prominent, fever was universally present, and the main presenting syndrome was community-acquired pneumonia. The primary concern relates to the potential for fluoroquinolone-induced arthrotoxicity in infants and children. "Oh yeah," said an official close to the Mexican President, "Felipe is going crazy." They need while at school, according to the NIH. The loaves (white, wholemeal, multigrain, sliced or unsliced),